MR. W. G. OAKMAN RESIGNS

The First Vice-Presidency of the Richmond and Danville Railroad Company.

A YERY SERIOUS LOSS TO THE SYSTEM.

Skotch of His Career-Prominent in a Business and Social Way-His New Position With a New Jersey Road.

The Richmond and Danville Railroad has become such a factor in the welfare of Richmond, and indeed of the wnole South, that whatever concerns its management is of very general interest.

From the time that the control of the Danville railroad and its subordinate lines passed out of the hands of the syndicate of Richmond men, who controlled its destines, it has been owned in New York, and for the most part managed there.

Conspicuous among those who have guided its physical and financial destinies for eight years past is Mr. W. G. Oakman, whose resig-nation as first vice-president takes effect today.

Knowing that this gentleman has won the universal confidence and respect of the Southern people, with whom both in business and socially he has been thrown, The Times gives a railroad man, not a sketch of his career as a railroad man, not only as a well deserved tribute of respect to a friend of the South, but that the recognition friend of the South, but that the recognition and appreciation of such merit may encourage others to emulate Mr. Oakman, whose resignation as first vice-president, it is well known by all acquainted with the man and the property, entails a severe loss upon the whole Richmond and Danville railroad whole Richmond and Danville Faintoau

Though scarcely forty years of age, Mr.
Oakman has had an unusually valuable traiting in railroad service, and is one of the few practical railroad managers of this country whose professional information embraces experience in the financial as well as the operating and mechanical departments.

Mr. Oakman was born in Philadelphia, Pa., where the early years of his life were spent.

After graduating from the University of Pennsylvania he went to Paterson, N. J., where his father owned a large silk factory and was then residing.

Together with Mr. R. S. Hayes, now president of the St. Paul and Duluth Railroad Company, and who was for many years vice-president and manager of Mr. Gould's Southwestern system, Mr. Oakman entered almost immediately after graduating from college western system, Mr. Oakman entered almost immediately after graduating from college the works of the Rogers Locomotive and Machine Company at Paterson.

He served a regular apprenticeship in all the departments of these extensive works, becoming an expert in both the theoretical and practical knowledge of locomotive building.

At the expiration of his service with the Rogers Company, Mr. Oakman accepted a position of confidence of the head of one of the departments of John S. Kennedy & Co., New York bankers.

While he was with this firm they undertook the promotion and construction of the St. Paul, Minneapolis and Manitoba railroad, now the Great Northern, and also the International and Great Northern milroad of Texas. In 1877 Mr. Oakman accepted the superintendency of the Utica division of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad, which position he occupied until 1882, bringing that portion of the company's property from a condition of unprofitableness to one of profit and importance.

from a condition of unprofitableness to one of profit and importance.

Upon the resignation of this position he returned to New York and established an office at No. 18 Wall street as a railroad expert which he maintained until the fall of 1883, when he accepted the third vice-presidency of the Richmond and Danville Railroad Company, receiving charge of the financial and accounting departments, including the New Yerk financial office of the company.

Mr. Oakman has remained in the service of the Richmond and Danville Railroad Company since that time, with the exception of a brief period in 1887, when he resigned, becoming a member of the banking house of Smith, Oakman & Ryan.

With faith in the South and in the future of this great railread, which faith has never since flagged nor varied, Mr. Oakman worked for the improvement and development of this property with all the zeal and enthusiasm of his warm nature, ably aiding with skill and experience the efforts of the managers to build it up and extend it.

Being a practical railroad man, Mr. Oakman has been able to and has always shown a proper appreciation of the work of his subordinate officers and employes, meeting service well done with applause, and errors with consideration and kindness.

These qualities have endeared him alike to the officers and employes of the Richmond and Danville system, and no one will regret the severance of his official relations more

In 1878 Mr. Oakman married Miss Elizabeth Conkling, the only chid of the late Roscoe Conkling of New York.

Mrs. Oakman is a niece of the late Horatio Seymour, of New York, and is a cousin of Mr. Fairchild, late Secretary of the United tates Treasury.

Mr. Oakman leaves the management of the Richmond and Danville railroad to accept a po-sition of equal responsibility with the Central railroad of New Jersey, which terminates at aration from his family and frequent and pro-longed absence from home necessary in the management of so extensive a property as that controlled by the Richmond and Danville Railroad Company,

The Fabric

Known as Cheviot has of late years become very popular with men of good taste in dress. There are a variety of reasons for this, chief among which is the fact that from its lossely woven texture it is the coolest possible material for street or business wear. While it is apparently rough in surface it is soft and silken to the touch, and possesses heft enough to retain its shape. From its increasing popularity the great designers have lent their best efforts to produce patterns in Cheviots that vie with the most elegant French Cassimeres. We have this season secured the choicest results of the designer's art in Cheviots, and jashioned them into garments-ready for immediate use---that will compare favorably with the very finest custom-made clothes it is possible to produce. A swell tailor will charge you $40, $50 or $60 for an imported Cheviot Suit. The fit and shape will in no case be superior to that of one of ours at $15, $18, $20 or $25. The material of our $18 to $25 Suits is quite as good, being imported goods. The trimmings of ours cannot be excelled. Our vast facilities alone enable us to do these things, and, what is of quite as much importance, we show such a varicty of styles and patterns that no matter what day. your fancy calls for, if it's made it is sure to be here. We've got it await. ing your pleasure. It is a rare thing indeed when being suited. It would be suicidal for us to make these statements if we were not prepared to substantiate them. We know it, you know it; do not hesitate then, but be wise in your generation and come right here jor your Spring Suit. evening.

It was the first in the annual series of Thomas memorial lectures, and these lectures always draw large crowds.

Professor Clarke has already been introduced to the readers of Tar Times. He was presented to the audience last evening in a neat speech by Professor Winston.

This course of lectures, Professor Winston said, is a boon to the community, and a worthy recomment to the well-known practiwhose name it bears.

This is the fourth series of these lectures which to supply his wants.

As a trustworthy guide in this study Professor Winston said he was glad to introduce Professor Clarke, a learned chemist and competent scientific investigator.

Professor Clarke in introducing his subject,
"The Chemistry of the Earth's Crust," reminded his audience that nature, like man, does her grandest work without making much noise or display.

The crust of the earth is quite thin in com-constituting this mass, such as iron. copper, sulphur, &c., and to some extent we are famil-

If it should become cheap it will no doubt displace many of the common metals for various purposes. It is only one-third as heavy as iron, and does not rust.

The lecturer reviewed briefly the modern theories in regard to the origin of the earth's crust.

Mayor Ellyson and a number of other prominent men from the city were in the audience.

Professor L. R. Hamberlin will give one of its delightful readings in Lynchburg this seening.
